A LOOK INTO OUR HISTORY

Founded in 1851, Florida State University is the oldest site of higher education in Florida. Although FSU can trace its earliest roots to the 1820s, the school was officially chartered in 1851 when Florida state legislators provided for the establishment of the "West Florida Seminary" in 1857 on the iconic hill where the Westcott Building now stands. By 1897, it grew into the first liberal arts college in the state.

In 1905, the West Florida Seminary became an all-women's college and was renamed "Florida State College for Women." By the 1930s, it was the third largest women's college in the nation. As soldiers returned from WWII, the Florida Legislature made the institution coeducational and renamed it to "Florida State University" in 1947. A new school seal featuring three torches - Vires, Artes, Mores, which translates to Strength, Skill, Character - was created to signify the passing down of knowledge to future generations.

In each succeeding decade, Florida State University has grown in both size and impact. FSU continues to gain prominence as a preeminent research university that is dedicated to student success through excellence in teaching, research, creative endeavors, and service opportunities.

TRIBE OF FLORIDA

The name "Florida State Seminoles" was selected by vote of the university community in 1947, shortly after FSU became a coeducational institution. The name was selected specifically to honor the indomitable bravery, strength, and spirit of the Seminole Tribe of Florida. For more than seven decades, FSU has worked closely with the Seminole Tribe of Florida to ensure the dignity and propriety of the various Seminole symbols used by the university. FSU aspires to be a model community that treats all cultures with respect while celebrating the Unconquered Spirit of the Seminole Tribe.
